

TABLE OF CONTENT

TABLE OF TABLES	11
TABLE OF FIGURES	12
LIST OF ANNEXES	13
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	14
ABBREVIATIONS	16
PREFATORY NOTES	19
INTRODUCTION	21
PART I: AGRARIAN STRUCTURE, LAND OCCUPATIONS, AND AFRICAN PALM IN HONDURAS AND THE BAJO AGUÁN
CHAPTER 1: SETTING THE SCENE: PRESENTATION OF HONDURAS AND THE BAJO AGUÁN REGION	31
1. Honduras	31
1.1. A complex geography	31
1.2. Politics and economy	33
1.2.1. Failed democratisation in the 1980s	33
1.2.2. Structural adjustment, concentration of political power and increasing social polarisation in the 1990s	34
1.2.3. Socio-economic consequences of structural adjustment	34
1.3. Agriculture, agrarian structure and rural livelihoods	36
1.4. Land governance	37
2. The Bajo Aguán region	38
2.1. The physical environment and agriculture	39
2.2. Population, economy and infrastructure	42
Conclusion	44
CHAPTER 2: THE AGRARIAN HISTORY OF HONDURAS AND THE BAJO AGUÁN	47
1. The colonisation and the emergence of the latifundio-minifundio complex	47
2. The liberal reform of 1876, the new economic model and the expansion of estates	48
3. The banana republic	49
4. The agrarian reform period	51
4.1. Land occupation to exert pressure for agrarian reform	51
4.2. The agrarian reform and its implementation	52
4.3. The agrarian reform in the Aguán	53
4.4. Achievements and limits of the agrarian reform	53
5. The neoliberal period: towards land concentration and increasing land conflict in the Bajo Aguán	54
5.1. The 1980s, the economic crisis and the switch to land titling	54
5.2. The structural adjustment programmes and the Ley para la Modernización	55

5.3.	Consequences of the Ley para la Modernización on the agrarian policies and the land structure	56
5.4.	Persisting land inequalities, market-led agrarian reform and rising land conflict	57
5.5.	The Decree 18-2008	59
5.6.	The 2009 military coup and the multiplication of land occupations	59
Conclusion		61
 CHAPTER 3: AFRICAN PALM IN HONDURAS		 63
1. African palm: general aspects		63
1.1.	African palm: a booming crop	63
1.2.	A brief history of African palm expansion	64
1.3.	Key figures on global African palm production and consumption	65
1.4.	Key characteristics of production, processing and commercialisation of palm fruit and oil	66
1.4.1.	Production	66
1.4.2.	Processing	67
1.4.3.	Commercialisation of crude palm oil	69
1.5.	The Roundtable on Sustainable Palm Oil (RSPO) certification	70
2. The African palm sector in Honduras		71
2.1.	A brief history of African palm production in Honduras	71
2.2.	The African palm sector in Honduras today	74
2.2.1.	Production	74
2.2.2.	Processing	76
2.2.3.	Commercialisation	76
Conclusion		77
 PART II: THEORY AND FIELDWORK
 CHAPTER 4: THEORETICAL SOURCES		 81
1. Land struggles, agrarian policies, and land occupations		81
1.1.	Agrarian reforms in Latin America	81
1.2.	Land occupations as agrarian reform from below?	84
2. Adverse incorporation into the oil palm global value chain		88
2.1.	Global value chains	88
2.2.	Adverse incorporation into agribusiness value chains	89
2.3.	The palm oil value chain and adverse incorporation	90
3. The rural livelihoods approach		92
3.1.	Early frameworks	92
3.1.1.	The roots of the approach	92
3.1.2.	Context of emergence of the approach	93
3.1.3.	Core elements and principles of the initial approach	94
3.2.	Criticisms of early frameworks and subsequent fields of discussion	97
3.2.1.	The rationality of livelihoods: towards a holistic understanding of poverty and livelihoods decision making	98
3.2.2.	Livelihoods and globalisation	99
3.2.3.	Livelihoods formation as a dynamic process	100
3.2.3.1.	Livelihoods systems, styles, pathways, and trajectories	100

3.2.3.2. Social mobility	102
3.2.4. Power relations	102
Conclusion	104
CHAPTER 5: THEORETICAL FRAMEWORK	107
1. Research question	108
1.1. Land occupation	108
1.2. The household	110
1.3. The asset base	110
1.4. Needs and livelihoods decision taking	112
1.5. The portfolio of activities	113
1.6. Livelihoods trajectories and pathways	113
1.7. Access to land and livelihoods through the struggle in the social field of land	114
2. Hypothesis 1	115
2.1. Land, agriculture, and livelihoods diversification	116
2.1.1. Origin and definition of livelihoods diversification	116
2.1.2. Determinants of livelihood diversification	117
2.2. Compared Agriculture	118
3. Hypothesis 1.1.	118
4. Hypothesis 1.2.	119
5. Hypothesis 2	120
5.1. Semi-proletarianisation	121
5.2. Adverse incorporation into the palm oil global value chain	121
Conclusion	123
CHAPTER 6: FIELD SURVEY: ORGANISATION AND UNFOLDING PROGRESS	125
1. General description of the fieldwork	125
1.1. First period of fieldwork (September to December 2014)	125
1.2. Second period of fieldwork (August to December 2015)	126
1.3. Third period of fieldwork (October 2017 to January 2018)	127
2. Data collection methods	127
2.1. Directive and semi-directive interviews	127
2.2. Non-participant observation	128
2.3. Other methods	128
3. Population and sampling	129
3.1. Land occupations, leaders and activists	129
3.2. Households	130
3.3. Palm chain agents	132
3.4. State actors	133
3.5. Local and national civil society organisations and NGOs	134
3.6. Researchers	134
4. Challenges during data collection and impact on collected data	135
4.1. An unfamiliar environment	135
4.2. Position as a researcher: Investigating land and agricultural issues in Honduras as a gringa	136
4.3. Difficulties with planning ahead and timely data collection	137
4.4. Incomplete, undetailed, unreliable, and missing data	139

Conclusion	140
PART III: RESULTS: THE PLACE OF FARMING AND OF OIL PALM CROPPING IN LIVELIHOODS AND INCOME
CHAPTER 7: FROM ORGANISATION OF THE LAND OCCUPATION TO PROVISIONAL TITLE: THE HOUSEHOLDS' LIVELIHOODS TRAJECTORIES	143
1. Organising the MCA's land occupation	143
1.1. The formal and informal rules in the social field of land	143
1.1.1. The legal procedure to request collective land allocation from the state	144
1.1.2. Access to land in practice	145
1.2. MCA: the actors in the social field of land	145
1.2.1. The INA	145
1.2.2. The landholders	146
1.2.3. The Pastoral Social	147
1.2.4. The national peasant federations	149
1.2.5. The households	150
2. Arriving on the CREM lands: 'They started putting up flags, tents, and saying "this is our land"'	152
2.1. 'So the MCA decides to take over the land': the land occupation and the changing power relations	152
2.1.1. The landholders	152
2.1.2. The INA	153
2.1.3. The Pastoral Social, the peasant federations, and international NGOs	153
2.1.4. The MCA	154
2.2. 'No one had money in his pocket': the households' difficult livelihoods in the first months	155
3. 'Somos de madera de hacha': the long and winding road to the provisional title	158
3.1. The first years on the land	158
3.1.1. The Pastoral Social, the peasant federations, and the international cooperation	158
3.1.2. The INA	159
3.1.3. The landholders	159
3.1.4. The MCA	160
3.2. The livelihoods on the lands	161
3.2.1. Farming	161
3.2.2. Towards off-farm and non-farm	163
3.2.3. Changing portfolios, upward mobility, and poor social differentiation	164
4. The provisional titles and the rise of palm in the MCA	165
4.1. Progressive shifts in the power relations in the social field of land	165
4.1.1. The INA	165
4.1.2. The landholders	166
4.1.3. The NGOs and the peasant federations	167
4.1.4. The MCA: 'From there to here, the movement took a nosedive'	167
4.2. Livelihoods: towards palm monoculture	170
4.2.1. Farming	170
4.2.2. Non- and off-farm activities and migration	172
5. The trajectories in the MCR and UL	173

5.1.	The emergence of the MCR and UL	173
5.2.	The MCR's conflictive struggle	175
5.2.1.	Arriving on the lands: 'Rigores has been a very lonely movement': actors and changing power relations	175
5.2.2.	Of orange and palm plantations: livelihoods in the MCR	178
5.3.	The unfinished struggle of Unidos Lucharemos	180
5.3.1.	Actors and power relations	180
5.3.2.	From corn to plantain: livelihoods in Unidos Lucharemos	181
Conclusion		183

CHAPTER 8: LIVING ON THE OCCUPIED LANDS TODAY 185

1. Living in the MCA	186
1.1. The environment	186
1.1.1. The physical environment	186
1.1.2. The socio-political environment: the actors in the social field of land	188
1.1.3. The MCA's governance structure	189
1.1.3.1. The General Direction	189
1.1.3.2. The Empresas Asociativas Campesinas	190
1.2. The household economy	191
1.2.1. The human assets: structure and characteristics of the households	191
1.2.1.1. The composition of the households	191
1.2.1.2. Age	191
1.2.1.3. Education	192
1.2.1.4. Health	192
1.2.2. The households' needs	192
1.2.2.1. Physiological and security needs	192
1.2.2.2. Social and esteem needs	193
1.2.3. Socio-economic roles and decision making about livelihoods in the household	193
1.2.3.1. The head of the household	194
1.2.3.2. The wife of the head of the household	194
1.2.3.3. The children	195
1.2.4. Changing patterns: insights into the previous and the following generations	195
1.3. The households' livelihoods activities	196
1.3.1. Farm activities	196
1.3.1.1. The characteristics of the farmland	197
1.3.1.2. Crops and livestock	199
1.3.1.3. Farm equipment and tools	202
1.3.1.4. Farm inputs	203
1.3.1.4.1. Seeds	203
1.3.1.4.2. Weed killers and fertilizers	203
1.3.1.5. Credit and other sources of cash-flow	204
1.3.1.6. Farm labour	205
1.3.1.6.1. Labour investment	205
1.3.1.6.2. Skills and knowledge	207
1.3.1.6.3. Individual and collective labour	207
1.3.1.7. Productivity and production destination: market and private consumption	207
1.3.1.7.1. Corn and beans	207

1.3.1.7.2. Palm	208
1.3.1.8. Production systems	209
1.3.2. Non- and off-farm activities	210
1.3.2.1. Opportunities for non- and off-farm activities	210
1.3.2.2. Types of non- and off-farm activities	211
1.3.2.3. Low income, instability, and hardship	212
1.3.3. Illegal activities	213
1.3.4. Migration and remittances	214
1.3.4.1. Characteristics of migration	214
1.3.4.2. Remittances and their use	215
2. Comparison of the livelihood activities between MCA, MCR, and UL	215
2.1. Living in the MCR and UL	216
2.2. Livelihood activities: similarities between the three land occupations	217
2.2.1. Farm activities	217
2.2.2. Non- and off-farm activities	218
2.3. Livelihoods activities: differences between the three land occupations	219
2.3.1. Farm activities	219
2.3.1.1. Land	219
2.3.1.2. Crops and production systems	219
2.3.1.3. Other production factors	220
2.3.1.4. Productivity and commercialisation	220
2.3.2. Other activities	220
2.3.2.1. Non- and off-farm activities	220
2.3.2.2. Other income sources	221
2.3.2.2.1. Remittances	221
2.3.2.2.2. NGO support	221
Conclusion	222
CHAPTER 9: THE CURRENT ROLE OF LAND IN HOUSEHOLD LIVELIHOODS	223
1. Activity portfolios and income evaluation	223
1.1. Income per activity	223
1.1.1. Farm income	224
1.1.2. Comparison of the income the activities generate	230
1.2. Income of activity portfolios	232
1.2.1. Combination of activities in portfolios and income generated	232
1.2.2. Comments on the portfolios and income estimation	238
1.3. Land and farm activities within the portfolios today	240
1.4. Remittances and NGO support and their impact on income	242
1.5. Mechanisms of social upward mobility and social differentiation	243
1.5.1. Social upward mobility	243
1.5.2. Social differentiation	244
2. Other uses and values of the land	245
2.1. Land as a living space	246
2.2. Land, social assets, and flows	248
2.3. Land and identity	249
2.4. Land and advocacy	251
Conclusion	253

CHAPTER 10: HOUSEHOLDS AND AFRICAN PALM: TOWARDS ADVERSE INCORPORATION INTO THE GLOBAL VALUE CHAIN?	255
1. The MCA palm producers: a brief history of their incorporation into the palm oil GVC	258
1.1. The MCA's initial years on the lands and the beginning of palm commercialisation	258
1.2. The palm boom and the complexification of the palm oil global value chain at the local level	260
2. The agents of the palm oil GVC in the Bajo Aguán	263
2.1. The first level processors	263
2.1.1. Private sector companies	263
2.1.2. 'Social economy' processors	265
2.2. The intermediaries	266
2.2.1. Private intermediaries	266
2.2.2. 'Social economy' intermediaries: the independent producers' association APROVA	267
2.3. The producers	268
3. Buyer-seller arrangements	268
3.1. Types of contracts	269
3.1.1. The contract based on a simple registration	269
3.1.2. The enlarged registration contract	270
3.1.3. The contract based on membership	271
3.2. Predominance of the simple registration contract among the producers of the MCA	271
4. Adverse incorporation into the palm oil GVC	273
4.1. Outcomes of the simple registration contract	273
4.2. Mechanisms of the simple registration contract leading to adverse incorporation	274
4.3. Incorporation through the other contracts	277
4.4. Structural factors underlying the adverse mechanisms of the contracts	278
4.5. Why did the producers look for incorporation into the palm oil GVC?	279
Conclusion	281
 CONCLUSION	 283
Background and research question	283
Summary of the research findings	285
 BIBLIOGRAPHY	 293
 LIST OF ANNEXES	 315